WHAT THEY SAY

"Bonnie Way is, above all, a writer. This is most apparent in the thoroughly professional way in which she approaches her work. You'll never find Bonnie doing a cut-and-paste job, taken directly from a press release. Oh, no! She gives every review the time, attention, and serious thought that are so rare in today's blogosphere. The results are honest, articulate, perceptive, and engaging reviews, which are helpful not only to Bonnie's readership, but also to my clients. I love working with Bonnie, and you will, too!" ~ Elizabeth Waldman Frazier, Waldmania Public Relations

"It was a pleasure to work with Bonnie on our Back-to-School campaign. Her review was well-written, concise and posted on time. I look forward to working with her again in the future." ~ Lisa, Oliver's Labels Social Media

Aveeno® Baby Helps Jade's Dry Skin

APRIL 1, 2015 | BY BONNIE WAY | 5 COMMENTS

I first noticed Jade's dry skin a few days after her birth. I asked my midwife about it, because I hadn't noticed flaking or itching skin on my first two daughters. She assured me that dry skin was normal for a baby and that I could just use whatever lotion I used on my own skin.

However, Jade (now two) has continued to have dry skin and I've learned that I need to be careful to take care of her skin. When we went back to Alberta for her first Christmas, the dry winter air caused her to develop bad rashes on her cheeks. It took me months to treat that. Then she began scratching her upper arms and backs until her skin bled and scabbed.

Aveeno® Baby

To take care of Jade's skin, I started using the AVEENO® Baby Daily Care line. I use AVEENO® Baby Wash & Shampoo in her bath. I've tried various bath products and even, for a while, washed her just with water because I was worried about the chemicals in various soaps. Some soaps can actually dry baby's skin more or cause other reactions. With AVEENO® Baby Wash & Shampoo, I don't have to worry about Jade's sensitive skin because it's gentle enough even for daily use.

Every night when getting her ready for bed, I put AVEENO® Baby Daily Lotion on her. I give her arms, legs, back and tummy a quick massage with lotion. Thankfully,

How to Choose the Right Family Doctor for Your Pregnancy

NOVEMBER 2, 2015 | BY BONNIE WAY | 5 COMMENTS

One of the biggest hassles and stresses that comes with moving to a new city is finding a new family doctor. If you are pregnant, then this is even more stressful. After having three (almost four!) babies and living in six different cities, I've experienced my share of doctors and prenatal care and the stress of finding the right care during pregnancy.

Now, the Vancouver Division of Family Practice is making it easier for pregnant moms to find a prenatal doctor. PregnancyVancouver.ca features an interactive, searchable map of family doctors who offer maternity care and a collection of information and resources for pregnant patients. You can also refine your search preferences according to the language spoken by the doctor or whether you prefer a male or female physician.

If you're wondering how to choose the right family doctor for your pregnancy, here are a few tips to consider, from my own experience with four pregnancies and 6+ care providers.

Heritage Camping at Rocky Mountain House National Historic Site

AUGUST 17, 2016 | BY BONNIE WAY | COMMENT

"We're going to camp in a tipi!" Sunshine told her grandparents, aunts and uncles, cousins, friends, and anyone else we ran into. I smiled at her excitement, because I was nearly as excited as she was. Since booking our stay in the Heritage Camping at Rocky Mountain House Historic Site a few weeks before our visit, I'd been counting down the days until we arrived.

On Sunday afternoon, we bought some groceries and hit the road. The girls listened to an audio book while I followed the zigzag road to Rocky Mountain House. The National Historic Site is easy to find; there are big signs along the highway. It's located just five minutes outside of town.

Arriving at Rocky Mountain House National Historic Site

We checked in quickly at the Visitor Centre and then followed their directions to the Heritage Camping area. Two more staff members waited there to show us our tipi. When they left, we had the campground to ourselves. The girls ran circles and checked out the tipi while I unloaded the van.

Get Access to Every 'Adventures in Odyssey' Episode Ever!

AUGUST 20, 2015 | BY BONNIE WAY | COMMENT

It's August, which means it's nearly time for your kids to pack up their pencils, zip up their backpacks, and hop on the school bus (or sit down at the kitchen table with you for school). Aside from prepping them for their new teachers, new classes, or maybe even a new school (or new school routine at home), it's important to prep their faith.

Sign your whole family up for Adventures in Odyssey's Odyssey Adventure Club for a special price of $9.99/month. The club is an essential tool to teach your children to share their faith at school, to be bold, and to grow in their relationship with God.

Sunshine and Lily love audiobooks so they've been enjoying the Adventures in Odyssey stories. Recently, we listened to the Drop Box, a story about Whit and Eugene going to South Korea to meet Pastor Lee Jong-Rak and find out about his
